Excerpt 1

The city and its surrounding state stood at a crossroads between the cultures of the North and the South, between slavery and freedom, between an older America and a new one.

American Scholar, 2011

Excerpt 2

Late on the night of May 8, another mysterious steamboat docked in St. Louis, this one unloading cargo rather than taking it aboard.

American Scholar, 2011

Excerpt 3

PHOTO: Among the six pounds of gold artifacts found in the graves at Varna were several zoomorphic figures, such as the one above, likely depicting bulls, which may have been used as amulets.

Archaeology, 2011

Excerpt 4

It's a starry night in August. A clutch of eggs lies hidden more than two feet below a sandy beach. The nest holds more than 100 eggs. Each egg is about the size of a golf ball. Inside each one, there may be a baby green sea turtle. From the start, what happens to these turtles depends on the environment.

National Geographic, 2010

Excerpt 5

It was an orb of light, just a big ball of light. It wasn't moving. One was solid white. The other one was directly across the street from it, about 300 feet above ground. And the one that I videotaped was just changing colors very, very rapidly. You could see these lights spinning like a carousel.

ABC Primetime, 18 August 2008

Excerpt 6

Yet here are Manning and Romo in 2007, each eagerly handed the long-term hopes of his franchise. They have arrived at the same place, figuratively and literally, as Manning's 6-2 Giants play Romo's 7-1 Cowboys today at Giants Stadium.

Unpredictably, each has become a little the way the other one was. It is Manning who has nurtured and almost retreated into a quiet and unassuming public life. It is Romo who is known as much for his red-carpet appearances and romantic dalliances as for his fantasy football numbers.

New York Times, 11 November 2007

Excerpt 7

The babble of many voices confused him, but he soon saw something downright disconcerting. Two Nozakis. One of them spoke, and she wore a pressure suit without a helmet. The other was seated, listening along with everyone else, and she wore a blue thermal jersey and leggings.

T. Sullivan, Star-Crossed, 2010

Excerpt 8

Now there was a white wall just a few feet behind me. In the wall were two matte black doors like the one that had brought me to Venus. One was marked with a big red X, the other was unmarked.

Analog Science Fiction and Fact, 2010

Excerpt 9

She walks into the hall, opens the closet door, and says, 'All right, gentlemen, which ones are the dishtowels?'

'The blue ones with red stripes,' Hoot says.

Arkansas Review, 1994

Excerpt 11

'I am putting out the brown suit, sir.'
'No, I think I'll wear the blue with the faint red stripe.'
'Not the blue with the faint red stripe, sir.'

P. G. Wodehouse, My Man Jeeves, 1919

Excerpt 12

White House replicas for sale – a blue one, too.

Inman News, 20 November 2011

Excerpt 13

My tactic was to get a scarier piece of bait, and my dad's was to cast out to a school of fish farther from the dock.

Excerpt 16

Even domestic travelers taking Texas 6 north from the Southwest Freeway, looking for a lonely orange windsock by the side of the road, quickly discover that image is as outdated as the one of Sugar Land as a sleepy rural burg.

Houston Chronicle, 28 November 2010

Excerpt 17

And unless we go about tackling those three issues, all the rest of the things the president is talking about and others on Capitol Hill are talking about are minor-league issues. I'm not saying they're not important, not saying that they're not, you know, interesting, and I might like some of them. But if you don't deal with those three, those three are going to eat up everything else. And so we've got to start dealing with it.

CBS, Face the Nation, 27 February 2011

Excerpt 18

One factor that couldn't have hurt: both Dohrn's father-in-law and her former employer sat on the Northwestern board. But another was that her program reliably raked in major grants from the high-profile MacArthur Foundation and other grant makers.

W. Olson, Law School and Leftist Orthodoxy, 2011

Excerpt 19

I went down to the stream to see what it was like, carrying a longhandled salmon net I used for snapping turtles on the open lake. It had a two-inch mesh, much too big for anything I might find there, but I'd torn the netting on my other one so I took it with me anyway.

Harpers Magazine, 1996

Excerpt 20

This recipe is inspired by the method outlined in The Zuni Caf Cookbook by Judy Rodgers. A small chicken comes out the juiciest; a bigger one, the most crisp.

'The Perfect Roast Chicken', Sunset, 2011
